ABSTRACT

A guide to more than 650 study programs in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and the Republic of Ireland is presented for U.S. students who wish to study abroad. Many of the programs, which range in length up to a full academic year, are sponsored or co-sponsored by the U.S. colleges and universities. The remainder are offered by a variety of groups, including British and Irish schools and private agencies. An overview considers types of programs, finances, and travel and living. All programs are listed by country or region and city in which study takes place. Entries include: the name of the sponsoring institution, the program title, the location of the main program site, program dates, courses of study and areas of specialization available through the program, the availability of independent study and internships, program levels, credit offerings, eligibility, the language of instruction, type of courses, teaching methods, costs, housing, application deadlines, the primary contact for further information, and background information on the program, such as year the program was started and program-related travel. Appendices provide a list of consortia that sponsor programs and indexes of sponsoring institutions and fields of study. (SW)

PREFACE

Study in the United Kingdom and Ireland is the newest addition to IIE's series of study-abroad guides. This second edition provides information on more than 650 study programs that take place in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland, and the Republic of Ireland—altogether the most popular destination for U.S. students overseas.

Many of these programs, which range in length up to a full academic year, are sponsored or cosponsored by U.S. colleges and universities. The remainder are offered by a variety of organizations, including British and Irish universities and private agencies.

The information in the program listings is based on a May 1986 survey of all sponsors of programs in previous editions of IIE's Learning Traveler books, organizations that had informed IIE of new or previously unlisted programs, all U.S. colleges and universities listed in Accredited Institutions of Postsecondary Education 1985-86, published by the American Council on Education for the Council on Postsecondary Accreditation, and British and Irish universities, polytechnics, and other institutions of higher education.

The response from these organizations has been most gratifying. Program information and materials, requests for advertising space, and suggestions have come in steadily since the book was first announced. Given this intense interest and cooperation, Study in the United Kingdom and Ireland is as comprehensive as IIE can make it.

IIE would like to take this opportunity to thank all these organizations and the individuals who represent them for their invaluable contributions to this book. Because of their support, the first edition of Study in the United Kingdom and Ireland completely sold out, and we have every reason to expect equal success for this second edition.

IIE ADVERTISING POLICY

Advertising in Study in the United Kingdom and Ireland is limited to sponsors of study programs in Britain and Ireland whose courses are listed in the book. The opportunity to advertise is offered to enable sponsors to supplement the information in the program listings, and advertisers are solely responsible for the accuracy of the information in their advertisements.

The Institute of International Education does not attempt to evaluate programs listed in this book, nor can it verify statements made by advertisers in their ads. Inclusion of a program or advertisement does not imply IIE recommendation, nor does omission imply IIE disapproval.

Please note that program listings are free of charge and are provided by IIE as a public educational service. They are not contingent upon the purchasing of advertising space by the sponsor.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

Study in the United Kingdom and Ireland is the most comprehensive guide available to study in this friendly and fascinating area of the world. When used properly, the book can help you plan one of the most delightful and rewarding experiences of your life.

To derive maximum benefit from the book, it's important to understand how it is organized and what it can do for you—and what you have to do for yourself. We suggest that you begin by reading this section thoroughly; it explains the arrangement of the entries and how various terms are used. The following chapter on "PLANNING FOR STUDY IN BRITAIN AND IRELAND" should also be carefully reviewed. It describes the types of study programs, how to select the one most appropriate to your needs, how to arrange academic credit, where to find assistance, and other pertinent topics.

IIE tries to make the information in this book as accurate and useful as possible. Bear in mind, however, that information-gathering in publishing takes place long before a book appears and, in this case, before program arrangements can be finalized. For this reason, it's a good idea to use this book as a general resource for locating programs of interest. Final and full information on any program must be obtained directly from the program sponsor—not from this book and not from IIE.

It is the student's responsibility to review and evaluate the available courses of study. As noted elsewhere in this book, students currently enrolled in a U.S. college or university should consult their campus study-abroad adviser, who can offer invaluable assistance in selecting appropriate programs. Adults not currently enrolled in a U.S. college should contact program sponsors directly for full information and to determine their eligibility for a particular program.

For study in other parts of the world, please consult Academic Year Abroad, which lists over 1,180 foreign study programs around the world, held during the months of September to June, and Vacation Study Abroad, which describes over 1,000 summer and short-term programs.

Information on programs not listed in this edition may be sent to: Learning Traveler Editor, IIE Publications, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, NY 10017. Please enclose a flyer, brochure, poster, or course catalog when writing to us about a new or previously unlisted program.

Overall Organization of the Program Listings

In general, programs are listed by the country or region and city in which study takes place. Programs that operate in more than one country, including at least one area of Britain or Ireland, are listed first in the section called "MORE THAN ONE COUNTRY." The second section, "UNITED KINGDOM," includes programs that take place within more than one area of Britain, e.g., in England and Scotland.

The remaining programs are arranged in separate sections on England, Northern Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and the Republic of Ireland, subdivided alphabetically by city.

Program Sponsor and Name

Each entry begins with a number used to identify the program within the listing sequence and in the indexes at the back of the book. The name of the sponsoring institution is next, followed by the program title.

Many study-abroad programs are sponsored cooperatively by groups of colleges and organizations, or consortia. If five or fewer schools cosponsor a program, all are listed in the program description. Where the consortium has more than five members, the cosponsoring institutions will usually be listed in the Appendix.

Location

This line identifies the cities or areas in which resident study takes place. Some programs include travel to other places, and others hold orientation sessions elsewhere. These facts are noted in the entries, but the programs are listed under the country and city which constitute the main program site.

Dates

Exact dates are stated if they have been provided by the program sponsor. Enrollment is for the full period indicated; if you may enroll for less than the full period, this will generally be stated.

Remember that final program dates were often not available at the time our survey was conducted. It is important, therefore, to call or write the sponsor for exact information.

Subjects

Courses of study available through the program are listed here, along with information on concentrations and specialization, and the availability of independent study and internships. Consult INDEX II, Fields of Study, for assistance in locating programs in your specific field.

Level, Credit, Eligibility

If a program is limited to students of the sponsoring institution or consortium, this restriction or preference will be indicated here in bold italics. The academic level is listed next: freshmen, sophomores, juniors, seniors, graduates, professionals, or adult students. The term "undergraduates" is used to mean all undergraduates. "Precollege" will generally mean high school graduates who have not yet entered college. In some cases, sponsors list a minimum age requirement rather than an academic level.

Entries indicate the academic level for which the program is intended, but if a program is of special interest, it may be worthwhile to contact the program sponsor directly to determine whether exceptions can be made.

The number of credits offered for the complete program will generally be listed next. It may be expressed in quarter hours, semester hours, or trimester hours, depending upon the practice of the program sponsor. If the number of credits listed is for less than the full program, this will usually be specified.

Programs open to both undergraduates and graduates will list undergraduate credits first, then graduate credits, which are specifically designated "graduate credits."

Be sure to consult your academic or study-abroad adviser about receiving academic credit before you enroll in a program, particularly if it is sponsored by a school other than your own. Remember that transfer credit is never automatic; it must be arranged in advance.

On the graduate level, be particularly careful to clarify the awarding of academic credit in advance. Some programs accept graduate students but do not award graduate credit. Graduates often take undergraduate study-abroad courses for academic or cultural enrichment without the expectation of graduate credit.

Other eligibility requirements and course prerequisites are usually listed last in this section. In many cases, space considerations do not permit us to list requirements fully. It is necessary to get full details and clarification directly from the program sponsor.

Instruction

English is assumed to be the language of instruction for all study programs in Britain and Ireland, except where otherwise noted.

The type of courses students attend is discussed here: courses specifically arranged for the program group (which may be taught by U.S. or foreign faculty), special courses for foreigners at a foreign institution, or regular courses from the general curriculum of a foreign institution. The term "foreign faculty" generally refers to instructors native to the country in which the program takes place. For a full discussion of the types of courses and programs listed in the Learning Traveler, see the chapter on "PLANNING FOR STUDY ABROAD."

The end of this section briefly lists teaching methods used in the programs. Again, for more information, consult the sponsor directly, as space does not permit a full discussion of this topic in the book.

Highlights

This section includes information on the year the program was established, orientation, program-related travel, and the availability of program evaluations to prospective participants. "Orientation in U.S." usually means meetings held on the campus of the sponsoring school, but occasionally this will refer to something else, such as literature and reading materials distributed by mail. "Orientation abroad" will generally mean that it is held on the campus of the host institution; if it is held in a different city, this will usually be specified.

Many programs involve short excursions and longer program-related travel; wherever possible, the duration and destination of the travel are described.

The availability of program evaluations or a list of previous participants is the last item listed in this section. Evaluations may take any form, from comments of former students in the program to full academic review by a faculty committee. Similarly, the "list" of previous participants may take various forms; it may be the names and addresses of one or two students to contact by mail, or it may in fact refer to personal contact with returning students at orientation meetings on campus. Whether or not one of these statements appears in a program listing, it is wise to attempt to contact a previous participant in a program you find interesting. The firsthand experiences of your peers can be invaluable in helping you prepare for study abroad.

Costs

In this section, we have asked sponsors to provide a fairly complete picture of major program expenses: a "package amount," if possible. This amount is followed by a coded list of the items it includes: T (tuition), B (texts and reading materials), M (meals) or some M (anything less than three meals per day), RT (round-trip transportation between the U.S. and the program site), H (housing), E (excursions), F (fees connected with participation in the program), FT (field trips), and HI (health/accident insurance).

If any type of financial aid (other than loans) is available to participants in the program, the phrase "scholarships available" is used. We have indicated the availability of "work-study" in a similar fashion.

Housing

Many programs provide student housing; the entries indicate the type(s) of housing available. Programs that do not provide living facilities will usually provide a listing of available housing in the area.

Deadline

In most cases, deadlines are for the receipt of completed applications with all necessary supporting material: transcripts, recommendations, deposits, etc. Find out well in advance what application material is needed.

Some programs will admit students after the deadline, if there is still space available. Don't count on luck, however. Apply early!

Contact

The primary contact for further information and applications for a program is the individual, department, or organization listed first. Entries provide full addresses, telephone numbers, and telex numbers (if any) to help you obtain further information.

Programs sponsored by consortia will often list the administering school as the primary contact, followed by a reference to "see Appendix" for contact information at member schools. The usual rule in this situation is that students at member/participating schools apply to their campus study-abroad adviser, while students at nonmember schools should contact the main consortium office or the administering school.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

The Institute of International Education does not attempt to review or evaluate programs listed in this book. Inclusion of a program does not imply IIE recommendation, nor does omission imply IIE disapproval. Program evaluations and additional information must be requested directly from the program sponsor, NOT from IIE.

PLANNING FOR STUDY IN BRITAIN AND IRELAND

Great Britain and the Republic of Ireland provide U.S. students with the opportunity to study in a setting that is both foreign and familiar. The language, for instance, is the same, but the variety of "foreign" accents in which it is spoken may leave you utterly bewildered—or totally fascinated.

Although we trace many of our cultural, legal, and political institutions to British models, nevertheless profound differences exist, reflecting centuries of separate development. Consequently, you are exposed to a whole gamut of new cultural experiences—experiences that open up fresh perspectives on international political and economic issues, interpersonal relationships, and even ultimate career choices.

Given the academic and personal significance that your period of study abroad is likely to have, careful planning is essential. Allow at least a full year in which to research study programs, submit application forms, arrange for financial support, and complete prerequisite courses.

RESEARCHING THE OPTIONS

The range of study-abroad programs available to U.S. students is considerable. Many programs focus on specific academic disciplines, while others emphasize interdisciplinary cultural or area studies. Still others combine independent study or internships with traditional course work.

If you are currently enrolled at a college in the U.S., your choice of program should be determined by a realistic assessment of your academic preparation and objectives. Consult your campus study-abroad adviser or a faculty member knowledgeable about foreign study programs. The adviser can help determine whether the programs you are considering will mesh with your overall educational goals—and whether you will receive academic credit for them.

It remains your responsibility, however, to research the alternatives: read the program literature, contact program sponsors to ask specific questions, request and review any program evaluations available, and get in touch with students who have previously participated in programs that interest you. It is also helpful to meet with British or Irish students to learn what it is like to be a "foreign student" and perhaps to get some firsthand information about the area in which you'd like to study. Allow plenty of time for this research—and expect to discover a world of exciting educational possibilites.

It's important to realize that no study program can be a guaranteed perfect choice. Even when your program is entirely satisfactory, you may suffer periods of loneliness and disorientation simply because of the unfamiliar environment. One of the most important lessons to be learned from foreign study is flexibility—and a willingness to go on enjoying and learning even when confronting unexpected circumstances.

Language Considerations

The language of instruction in virtually all British and Irish universities is English. For many students this is one of the chief attractions of these islands: the opportunity to study abroad without having to learn a foreign language. Students interested in language study, however, will find a variety of suitable programs in the other national tongues: Welsh, Irish Gaelic, and Scots Gaelic.

If your interest is another European language, you might consider a multinational program that combines study in Britain or Ireland with a period of travel and study in the relevant country. Even where travel to Europe is not part of the program, you can easily take advantage of the fact that the rest of Europe is just a short hop across the Channel.

Program Location

The location of a program may be as important as any of its formal academic characteristics in determining its suitability for you. Britain may seem relatively small by comparison with the United States, but enormous diversity exists among its universities. Some, like Oxford and Cambridge, are ancient institutions founded in the twelfth century; others date from a period of expansion in the mid-1960's. If access to an ancient library, a modern research laboratory, or any other type of special facility or locale is important to you, be sure the program you choose can accommodate your needs.

Also consider the community in which the school is located. As in the United States, large cities may offer excellent cultural opportunities but tend to be expensive and impersonal. Small towns may offer more contact with local residents and traditional culture, but you may find the provincial lifestyle too limiting. Some universities are situated in "university towns," where the university itself is the center of the community's social, cultural, and economic life. You may find this to be the ideal setting—or you may prefer a more diversified situation.

Disabled Students

Many educational institutions provide facilities for the handicapped. However, the extent to which the disabled can be accommodated depends on the nature of the disability and the subject to be studied. If you require special educational aids or services, be sure to discuss your needs with the program sponsors and investigate the possibility of obtaining supplementary funds to cover the costs of services required.

Information for the handicapped traveler is available from the U.S. branch of Mobility International (MIUSA), which publishes a newsletter and several booklets. For information on cost and ordering, write to MIUSA, P.O. Box 3551, Eugene, Oregon 97403.

In the United Kingdom, the British Council Headquarters (at 10 Spring Gardens, London SW1A 2BN, England) offers the publication Guidance Notes for Disabled Students from Overseas.

The Irish Tourist Board publishes a guide entitled Activities and Facilities for Disabled Persons, available at any Irish Tourist Board office. The Union of Voluntary Organizations for the Handicapped, 29 Eaton Square, Monkstown, Co. Dublin, Ireland, may also be contacted for information.

Adult Learners

Although the focus of this book is undergraduate study abroad, it contains many programs organized specifically for adult learners. These include study tours, technical seminars, and adult center courses, and such diverse subjects as comparative law, cooking, scuba diving, geology, the occult, English country houses and gardens, the theatre, and, of course, the culture, language, and heritage of each area of these fascinating island nations.

The "Level, Credit, and Eligibility" subhead in each program entry indicates whether the program is open to adults and/or professionals. Some listings indicate a minimum age, maximum age, or average age, instead of an academic level, to guide you. Also consult INDEX II, Fields of Study, for a complete list of programs open to adults.

Some programs are designed for particular age groups. The international programs of Elderhostel (80 Boylston Street, Boston, MA 02216), which combine the best traditions of education and hosteling, are geared to people over 60. And the Interhostel program of the University of New Hampshire (Division of Continuing Education, 24 Rosemary Lane, Durham, NH 03824) is designed for adults age 50 and over.

Although U.S. college-sponsored programs are generally organized for undergraduate students, many of these also admit adults with a professional or personal interest in overseas study. This is particularly true of programs held during vacation periods. In these listings, the word "auditors" is frequently used to include adults and other students who are not interested in receiving academic credit. However, in order to save time and misunderstanding, adult learners should always contact the program sponsor directly to see if they are eligible to enroll.

EDUCATIONAL CHOICES

As an undergraduate student, you must determine the effect of study abroad on your degree and graduation requirements before enrolling in a program. Your academic adviser and campus study-abroad adviser can help evaluate foreign study in relation to your academic needs and may assist in arranging academic credit, selecting the type of program that suits you best, and preregistering for courses to be taken upon your return.

Arranging Academic Credit

U.S. college-sponsored programs generally award academic credit. Never assume, however, that credit will be granted automatically, or that you can wait until you complete the program to establish credit. Each school makes its own rules regarding transferable credits, and, if the program you select is not sponsored by your home institution, academic credit may not be accepted by it.

Once a proposed study program is approved by your adviser—and prior to departing from the United States—follow your school's specific procedure to ensure receipt of credit. It is strongly recommended that you secure a written document confirming that credit will be awarded. At some colleges or universities this may be done through the study-abroad office. At others, it will be handled by the admissions office or registrar.

Types of Study-Abroad Programs

Most undergraduates elect to enroll in programs sponsored by their own or other U.S. colleges. One advantage of U.S. college-sponsored programs is that they allow students to study in a foreign environment while remaining within a U.S. academic framework. Even where much of the actual course work is taken at a foreign university, academic credit is arranged through the U.S. sponsor. In addition, special courses in the culture and civilization of the host country may be provided. Finally, the sponsoring college usually either provides or helps arrange nonacademic essentials, such as housing and round-trip transportation.

Most programs fall into one of these categories:

1. Study in a foreign institution combined with courses arranged for the group by the sponsoring institution.

   This is the most common form of study-abroad program. Courses taken at the foreign institution may consist of regular university courses, special courses for foreign students, or courses in a specialized college (e.g., a teachers college or art school). The courses arranged especially for the U.S. students may be taught either by faculty from the home campus or by foreign and U.S. faculty engaged by the program sponsors.

One benefit of this type of program is that it lets you continue meeting requirements for your U.S. degree. It also offers readily available help with any difficulties you may encounter in the foreign courses.

2. The program that is fully integrated into a foreign university or other college-level institution.

   In these, you enroll in a complete academic program in the foreign institution. The sole concession made is that you may be allowed to take a wider range of courses than British or Irish students, who usually concentrate on a particular academic discipline. You will generally take end-of-year course examinations for each course you take, but will normally be exempted from the comprehensive examinations taken by local students.

   Because you are expected to compete on an equal footing with local students, you must make sure your academic background is adequate, particularly in the sciences or social sciences. The intensive nature of the local secondary school system tends to accelerate the difficulty of university and polytechnic courses in these fields.

   Although some programs provide supplemental tutorials conducted by U.S. faculty members, you will not have the opportunity to take any U.S. courses overseas. Accordingly, it is particularly important to schedule required coursework at your home campus before you depart.

3. The "island" program in which all courses are taught by faculty members of the sponsoring U.S. institution or by foreign faculty engaged specifically for the program.

   In this type of program, students typically travel, study, and generally live together as a group. The main advantage is that the sponsoring U.S. institution has as much control over the nature and quality of instruction as it has at home. The chief disadvantage is that you are isolated from the foreign academic milieu and may be isolated socially as well.

Nearly all the programs listed in this book fall into one of these categories. A few programs offer only independent study opportunities, which are individual arrangements between qualified students and their schools. In this type of program, you carry out preapproved research projects abroad and receive credit from your home institution. Other programs allow you to enroll in a foreign university and receive credit from your own school for coursework abroad.

Direct Enrollment

An increasing number of U.S. students are enrolling directly in British and Irish universities as "occasional" students—those who enroll for a limited period of time and do not intend to earn a degree. In addition to the programs listed in this book, many other British and Irish universities consider applications from U.S. students who wish to enroll on an "occasional" basis. For more information, contact the academic registrar of the university you wish to attend.

Neither British nor Irish universities assign academic credit for courses, so you must be particularly careful to make sure that your home university will accept the coursework evaluations provided by the foreign institution.

Direct enrollment as a matriculated student in a regular degree program is also possible if you have appropriate qualifications. Because undergraduate programs in Britain and Ireland are usually accelerated by American standards, U.S. undergraduates who are admitted into regular degree programs may be required to take preparatory coursework before beginning the standard course of study.

A word of warning: some schools limit the total number of international students that may be admitted. This is less often true in Britain, especially at the graduate level, where as many as one-third of all students are from overseas. In Ireland, stricter quotas on foreign students are found at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. The numbers of foreign students allowed in fields such as medicine, dentistry, sciences, and law are severely limited. Because restrictions may change from year to year, be sure to investigate current regulations early in the planning process.

If you are interested in a particular school, address your initial inquiries to the academic registrar of the school. Review your academic qualifications and your proposed field of study, and ask about admissions policies, costs, housing arrangements, and other facilities. To ensure a response, enclose an International Reply Coupon (available from any post office) with your inquiry.

For undergraduates, standardized application procedures have been developed in both Britain and Ireland, although the university you plan to attend will ultimately rule on your application. For British institutions, contact: Universities Central Council on Admissions (UCCA), P.O. Box 28, Cheltenham, Gloucestershire GL50 1HY, England.

For admission to British polytechnics, write to: Polytechnics Central Admissions System (PCAS), P.O. Box 67, Cheltenham GL50 3AP, England. For Irish universities, apply to: Central Admissions Office (CAO), P.O. Box 33, Eglinton Street, Galway, Ireland.

Remember that since educational systems vary, no foreign degree is exactly equivalent to a U.S. degree. If you are interested in graduate study abroad, be sure to conduct extensive research on the programs and universities that interest you. There are a number of guidebooks available, including the World Education Series, published by the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (AACRAO). Although designed for college admissions officers who need to evaluate foreign academic credentials, these publications provide an overview of each country's educational system. Write AACRAO, One DuPont Circle, Washington, DC 20038, for a complete list of titles.

Graduates normally apply for admission directly to the university (or, in the case of Oxford and Cambridge, to the college of the university) at which they wish to study.

Vacation Study Programs

Summer study abroad offers an excellent opportunity to combine vacation travel with a learning experience. Some British and Irish universities, polytechnics, and other organizations offer summer courses designed specifically for overseas students and adult learners. A variety of summer study programs is also offered by U.S. colleges and other educational organizations.

In addition to summer study, many excellent short-term programs, usually lasting two or three weeks, are offered by U.S. colleges and universities during interim sessions, usually in January. There are also specialized institutes that offer short-term programs focusing on the art, heritage, and culture of the country; these courses are often open to persons of any age.

Internships

Many foreign study programs feature internships, which are designed to provide hands-on experience in a particular field of interest and may involve placements at museums, schools, government offices, etc. Most are developed in close consultation with faculty advisers and are tailored to suit the special needs of the student. An internship's success depends almost entirely on the initiative and creativity of the student.

Because of the growing popularity of internship programs and the special arrangements they involve, you must apply for a position and begin making arrangements well in advance. As with other types of programs, do not forget to clarify the issues of costs, academic credit, salary (if any), and housing options. Use INDEX II, Fields of Study, to locate internship programs.

FINANCES

Establish a budget to help you determine which programs best meet your needs and financial capacity. Be especially careful to find out what program package fees do not cover. Program costs are submitted to IIE for this book some 12 to 18 months prior to the actual dates of the programs, so they should always be viewed as approximate. And fluctuations in foreign currency exchange rates and inflation can markedly affect relative costs in U.S. dollars. It is your responsibility to confirm program costs listed in this book by contacting the sponsor directly.

Items that must be included in your budget are transportation to and from the United States, tuition, fees, room and board, program-related travel, books, local transportation, and health and accident insurance. Additional expenses to consider are admission to cultural sites and events, gifts, optional travel (often an unexpectedly large item), bank charges for exchanging money, and miscellaneous personal expenses. Set aside some money for unexpected contingencies: they almost always occur.

Large amounts of cash should not be carried when traveling. Plan to bring between $50 and $100 in U.S. currency to cover a variety of minor traveling expenses. It is also wise to have about £100 in either British or Irish currency to cover your initial expenses in the event that the airport bank is closed when you arrive.

For daily expenses, rely on traveler's checks, which can be obtained in either dollars or pounds. International charge cards and bank credit cards can also be used in order to avoid the need to carry large amounts of cash. Depending on the length of your stay, you may find it convenient to establish an overseas bank account. If you are enrolling directly in an overseas university program, inquire whether you can arrange to have the necessary fees sent from your U.S. bank.

Scholarships

At present most financial assistance available for study abroad is for graduate and postgraduate study. Undergraduates with regular university scholarships, however, are often allowed to use them for their own school's overseas programs. Your study-abroad adviser, financial aid officer, or bursar can advise you on the possibility of using federal and state aid for foreign study.

The Information Center of the Institute of International Education maintains an extensive reference collection of scholarship and grant information, which is available through a personal visit to the Center at 809 United Nations Plaza in New York City. Please note that information is not available by mail or phone.

Working Abroad

The practice of working one's way through college is not common in either Britain or Ireland, due to the combined force of academic tradition, which considers employment to be inconsistent with full-time student status, and labor laws that severely limit work opportunities for foreign nationals.

There are a few types of study programs, however, that include work experience. Internships, work-study, and trainee positions, which pay a small salary, are occasionally available, as are vocationally oriented "sandwich courses" that alternate periods of academic study with relevant work experience. The pay is usually minimal and cannot be relied upon to cover the bulk of your expenses overseas.

There are also summer work programs and volunteer service projects, which usually offer room and board rather than a salary. Archaeological excavations, for example, often fall into this category. Many such projects are designed to offer opportunities to people from all over the world to live and work together with local people. They generally require no special skills, but offer a special learning experience.

An exception to the general prohibition on paid employment is the temporary work program offered by the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), through which participants receive temporary work permits for Britain or Ireland. Most participants find employment in the summer tourist industry, but they are also encouraged to seek out jobs in fields related to their academic interests. For more information on this program, contact CIEE at 205 E. 42nd St., New York, NY 10017; (212) 661-1414.

TRAVEL AND LIVING

After selecting a study program, it is time to prepare for life in a foreign country. Your study-abroad experience will have greater personal value if you take an active role in learning about the language, history, and culture of the country, as well as current social and political conditions.

Attend any orientation sessions offered by the sponsors of your program. The history and culture of the area in which the program is located are usually discussed in some detail. Be sure to review the program literature and assigned readings carefully and ask questions about issues that confuse you before they present real problems.

Books, periodicals, plays, films, and museum exhibits can provide additional information, as will the nearest British or Irish embassy, consulate, or tourist office.

Because of the prevalence of U.S. movies and television programs abroad, people are frequently curious about the United States. As a consequence, you can expect to be hit with a barrage of questions about our government policies, history, economics, culture, and lifestyle.

Laws and Customs

Orientation sessions usually review the more important laws, customs, and program regulations students must comply with. These are not empty warnings. One of the biggest mistakes you can make is to assume that behavior and actions acceptable at home are appropriate everywhere.

Students accepted into study-abroad programs are expected to be mature and well-motivated and to behave accordingly. If you repeatedly break university rules or act in an irresponsible manner, you risk dismissal from the program, and in extreme cases, arrest by local authorities. Dismissal under such circumstances will generally result in the complete forfeiture of program fees and tuition paid, as well as academic credit.

The use of narcotics or other proscribed drugs is, of course, illegal in both Britain and Ireland and can lead to severe penalties—at a minimum, expulsion from the program. Strict enforcement of narcotics laws affects even well-known personalities, a number of whom have served time in British and Irish prisons as a result. It is unwise to expect exceptions to be made for you.

For the most part, U.S. students in Great Britain and Ireland benefit from the same tradition of personal freedom that marks our own society, and are unlikely to be penalized for acting in a high-spirited manner. Do not confuse high spirits with rudeness or arrogance, however, or you may find yourself socially isolated from your British and Irish peers. Bear in mind that there are few pleasures to compare with the experience of forming friendships with people who have spent their entire lives in a different cultural milieu and who can communicate whole new perspectives on the most ordinary of life's experiences.

Accommodations

Student housing is difficult to find almost everywhere in Britain and Ireland, but there are a few exceptions to this general rule. At Oxford and Cambridge universities, residence in the college is a feature of the collegiate structure. To a lesser extent, this is also true of the University of Durham and Trinity College (University of Dublin), which are similarly organized. In general the more modern the university, the more likely it is to have built housing to accommodate its students.

University residence halls are similar to U.S. dormitories and usually serve some meals. Some institutions have self-catering halls, in which students buy and prepare their own food. Other students live in approved lodgings, where students can expect to have some meals provided, or in bed-sitters, which usually contain simple cooking facilities.

Participants in U.S.-sponsored programs may be placed in any of these types of accommodations, or, in some cases, in residences rented or owned by the sponsor. This arrangement is particularly common in London and other cities where student housing is especially hard to find. In London, it is not uncommon for students to spend an hour or more each day commuting to classes even when the sponsor provides housing.

U.S. students may also have the option of living with approved local families; this is particularly common in Scotland and Ireland, where university-owned housing is rare because most students still commute from home.

Be sure to find out whose responsibility it is to make housing arrangements. Check with the program sponsors to see what arrangements they have made and investigate the available alternatives. It is essential that housing arrangements be confirmed well in advance of the departure date.

Passports, Visas, and Vaccinations

Valid passports are required for travel to the United Kingdom and Ireland. You may apply in person to a passport agent at U.S. Department of State agencies in Boston, Chicago, Honolulu, Houston, Los Angeles, Miami, New Orleans, New York City, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Seattle, Stamford (Connecticut), or Washington, DC. Passports are also issued through selected post offices, or by clerks of any federal court or state court of records.

Proof of U.S. citizenship (birth certificate, naturalization certificate, or previous U.S. passport), two recent photographs (2" x 2"), and current identification with a personal signature and photograph or physical description (such as a driver's license) are required.

For citizens 18 years or older, a passport valid for ten years costs $35 plus a required $7 execution fee. A five-year passport for citizens under age 18 is $20 plus a required $7 execution fee. You must appear in person if you are applying for the first time, are renewing a passport issued over eight years ago, or were younger than 18 when your last passport was issued. Apply early: processing an application takes four to six weeks—longer during the peak travel season.

Visas are not required for U.S. citizens studying in Britain or the Republic of Ireland. When you enter either country, however, you will be required to present the following documents to the Immigration Officer: passport, evidence of acceptance into a study program, and proof of financial means to cover your accommodation and maintenance during your period of study (such as a letter from the program sponsor or host institution, a bank statement, or a letter from a parent or guardian).

If you stay for an extended period of time, you may eventually have to register as a resident alien. Your U.S. program sponsor or, if you are enrolled directly in a foreign university, your student union office can generally provide advice and assistance. In Britain, the United Kingdom Council for Overseas Student Affairs (UKCOSA) provides a full-time advisory service for foreign students. In Ireland, a similar service is provided by the Irish Council for Overseas Students (ICOS).

No vaccination certificates are needed for travel to either Great Britain or Ireland.

Medical Insurance and Other Health Concerns

The importance of having adequate insurance when visiting another country cannot be overestimated. Before leaving the United States, check your medical and accident insurance policies to be sure they are valid for overseas travel. If coverage does not extend to travel abroad, you may want to obtain supplemental medical and accident policies. Holders of the International Student Identity Card receive basic medical/accident insurance coverage for their travel outside the continental United States. To obtain this, contact the Council on International Educational Exchange (CIEE), 205 East 42nd Street, New York, New York 10017.

Both Britain and Ireland have national health service systems that provide free medical care to all eligible residents. U.S. students enrolled in full-time study programs lasting more than six months may be considered eligible. Since a number of factors may affect your eligibility, however, do not assume that you will receive free medical care. Be sure to clarify the issue directly with your program sponsor or host institution.

If you depend on certain prescription drugs, even intermittently, be aware that foreign drugs are not necessarily closely related to those standard in the United States. Similar drugs may be marketed under different names and may not be available in the strengths you desire. If you know that you will need certain medicines, bring along an adequate supply. Label all bottles clearly and carry copies of the prescriptions to avoid problems with Customs. In the case of narcotic medicines, it may not be prudent to carry additional supplies because of possible Customs difficulties. Nonprescription drugs such as aspirin and stomach remedies are readily available in Britain and Ireland, but it's always a good idea to carry a small amount with you when traveling.

Finally, if you wear prescription eyeglasses or contact lenses, bring an extra pair and your prescription. This is particularly important if you wear contact lenses, as you may not be able to obtain the specific type of lens you are accustomed to in the area where you will be studying.

Transportation

Many U.S.-sponsored study-abroad programs include group transportation. In other cases, students must provide their own transportation to and from the program site. British and Irish government tourist offices, consulates, and embassies provide a wide variety of free literature about travel to and in their countries.

Recent deregulation in the airline industry has resulted in a proliferation of discounted airfares. Shop carefully if you are looking for an inexpensive flight; the cheapest flight is not necessarily the one that best suits your needs. Fares that specify a return date should be examined closely, as these may not allow the flexibility you need.

Aim to travel lightly, especially if you are participating in a study tour. Remember that you will have to carry whatever you bring, so restrict yourself to no more than two moderate-sized bags and a small carry-on shoulder bag in which to keep valuables, passport, and camera equipment. Baggage and personal effects should be insured for the full duration of the period abroad. If you bring a camera, purchase a lead-lined film bag. Contrary to airport claims, some X-ray devices are ruinous to film.

Once abroad, railroads are often an economical and convenient way to travel. Britrail passes offer unlimited train travel within the United Kingdom for periods of one week to three months, with considerable savings to those who travel extensively during the covered periods. Available from travel agencies and many railroad offices in the U.S., the Britrail pass cannot be purchased abroad and is not valid for travel in the rest of Europe.

Coras Iompair Eireann (CIE), the national transport company of Ireland, offers discounted passes for unlimited bus and train travel within Ireland for 8- and 15-day periods. Contact CIE Tours International, 590 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10036.

The Eurailpass is also valid for travel in Ireland (but not in Britain) and on ferries operating between Ireland and France. This pass, too, must be purchased before leaving the United States.

If you think you might want to rent a car at some point, remember that in both Britain and Ireland, cars drive on the left-hand side of the road. Your U.S. driver's license is accepted in both countries, but, if you travel to the Continent, you should obtain an International Driver's License.

Be sure to allow sufficient funds to cover daily commuting costs, which can be fairly high in the major cities, where you may reside some distance from the school you attend. An excellent source of information about student travel is the Council on International Educational Exchange. CIEE publishes the Student Travel Catalog (annual, $1.00 postage and handling), and offers the International Student Identity Card as well as a wide variety of student travel services. The International Student ID Card entitles student bearers to numerous discounts on transportation, accommodations, museum entrance fees, and more. Contact CIEE headquarters at 205 East 42nd Street, New York, NY 10017, or Council Travel offices in major cities throughout the United States.

IIE-ADMINISTERED PROGRAMS

IIE administers U.S. student applications for the following study programs:

- British Universities Summer Schools—a joint summer program conducted by the universities of Birmingham (at Stratford-upon-Avon), London, and Oxford in literature, drama, and history.
- British Archaeology—a summer program of the Association for Cultural Exchange in Cambridge involving both classroom work and participation in archaeological digs.

For more information, write to IIE's U.S. Student Programs Division or contact your campus study-abroad adviser.

The Institute also administers the academic competition for the predoctoral Fulbright Program and the Fulbright Collaborative Research Program, both sponsored by the U.S. Information Agency, the ITT International Fellowship program, and a limited number of foreign government grants. IIE issues, receives, and screens applications and provides appropriate information on these financial aid programs. IIE-administered financial assistance programs for U.S. citizens to study abroad are described in the IIE publication Fulbright and Other Grants for Graduate Study Abroad published each May and available free of charge.

Students planning to apply for graduate awards through IIE should plan ahead. The application deadlines are typically October 31 for the predoctoral program and January 16 for the collaborative program. For more information, consult your campus study-abroad or Fulbright adviser.

Aside from these awards, the Institute does not offer any scholarships, awards, or loans for foreign study.

The Institute of International Education (IIE) is the largest U.S. higher educational exchange agency. A nonprofit organization with over 500 U.S. college and university members, IIE has provided information on educational exchange to higher education and the public for over 65 years. The Institute administers grants and fellowships that aid 9,000 individuals from the United States and 120 other nations annually.

USIA Fulbright Program. IIE assists the U.S. Information Agency (USIA) in the administration of the Fulbright Program of grants for graduate study abroad for U.S. students. Enrolled students who want to apply for Fulbright and other IIE-related graduate awards tenable in 1987/88 can request information and applications from their campus Fulbright Program Adviser after May 1 and before October 15, 1987. Students not currently enrolled may contact IIE's U.S. Student Programs Office for applicant information.

Information Center. Students and educators visiting New York City are encouraged to make use of the IIE International Education Information Center in planning study abroad. The center is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. each weekday except holidays. The center cannot provide research assistance by phone or letter.

IIE Offices. IIE services are offered through U.S. offices located in New York; Washington, D.C.; Atlanta; Chicago; Denver; Houston; and San Francisco. Overseas educational information centers are maintained in Bangkok, Thailand; Guangzhou, China; Hong Kong; and Mexico City. Program management offices are located in Bridgetown, Barbados; Harare, Zimbabwe; and Jakarta, Indonesia. For further information, contact the Communications Division at IIE's central office in New York City.
